

n emperor in the Far East was growing old. He knew it was time to choose his successor. Instead of choosing one of his children or his assistants, he decided that he would do something different. He called all the young people in the kingdom together.

